

HIKING PASOCHOA RESERVE – 4,200 MTS.

Pasochoa is an ecological and fauna reserve with an elevation of 4210mt, located in the south part of Quito. This area is the home for over 127 species of birds, 232 varieties of flora and 10 species of mammals. Its slopes provide some important water sources. The Reserve covers a surface of 500 hectares and possesses several microclimates with a tremendous quantity of wild birds, which is a magnificent opportunity for those who like to bird watch and take pictures.

We will departure early in the morning heading south towards this protected forest. We will reach the summit in 4 hrs.' hike approximately. On the top, we will have lunch while enjoying a great view of Cotopaxi snowcapped volcano and other nearby mountains. While hiking the impressive trails of this protected forest we can observe some deer, foxes, wild goats, rabbits, pumas (if lucky) and different kind of rodents. Throughout its paths, we can watch colorful butterflies, frogs, and other small wild animals. Return to Quito in the afternoon.

Price includes:

Private transportation, English-speaking guide, lunch

Price does not include:

Personal equipment, travel insurance, personal expenses, beverages and tips

We suggest bringing:

Rain wear, sun cream, sunglasses, hat with brim, warm clothing, small pack, camera